School Board's Report.

DIVISION NO. 1. Both terms were taught by Miss Kate O'Brien. A large part of the scholars in this school are quite young, and not so advanced in their studies as in some other schools. The teacher apparently had the good will of her pupils, and her labors were crowned with success.

DIVISION NO. 2. Miss Maud D. Mitchell, teacher of both terms. Miss Mitchell is one of those teachers that believe in a thorough knowledge of the ground gone over, rather than great haste in advancing, and good results followed her method of instruction.

DIVISION NO. 3. Spring term taught by Miss Elvia M. Cutler, with good success. This teacher very patiently taught a class of beginners to read, in addition to her other work. When scholars five years old, and probably younger, learn to read tolerably well in first reader, we feel that their teacher has done good work. The parents were sorry to lose the services of Miss Cutler in the fall term. Fall term, Miss Gertrude I. Nichols, teacher. We consider Miss Nichols worthy of praise for drilling the scholars in speaking loudly and with distinction. The final examination was very satisfactory, owing to the visitors and superintendent being able to hear everything very distinctly. Good progress was made.

DIVISION NO. 4. Miss Grace E. Webster, teacher of spring term. Only six pupils in attendance, a number too small to make an interesting school, but she did her best for the benefit of the few, with good results. Miss Elvia M. Cutler took charge of the fall term; with an increased number of scholars a greater interest was manifested, and a successful term was held.

DIVISION NO. 5. Miss Alice G. Wigley in the spring, and Miss Marion H. Brown in the fall, were teachers of the several terms. This school in scholarship and promptness has for several years past ranked second to no other in town. Both teachers were competent and faithful in their work, and good schools were the result of their labor.

GENERAL REMARKS.

The school year of 1896 is now numbered with the things of the past, and we are now able to give from our observation some estimate of the benefit derived from the expenditure of our school fund. We are happy to say, that if there has been nothing extremely phenomenal in the success of any one particular term, we can congratulate the district upon the fact that there has not been anything nearly approaching a total failure in any case; and we confidently assert the belief, that upon the whole, our schools have been well managed and as successful, when compared with those of late years; although from the reason of a smaller appropriation of school money, we have been compelled to somewhat curtail the length of the several terms. There have been five schools maintained the past year of twenty weeks each, in which it has been the aim of the School Board to have the interests of the younger people especially cared for, leaving the more advanced ones to derive the benefit of the high school. and in this matter we have been tolerably well seconded by the teachers.

We are sorry to notice that the pages of a few of the registers are defaced by an altogether too large a number of those ominous black marks and lines that denote a slackness in punctuality, and an indifference to receiving the full benefit of the school, on the part of a few of the scholars, or their parents—perhaps in some cases of both parties. It certainly is beneficial to children to train them up in habits of punctuality and promptness. There can be no better place for the lesson than in the school room, and in county schools at least, they are not overburdened with such excessively long terms of school that pupils can afford to lose the benefit of any great part of any session.

During the time in which the district has been furnishing the school books, there has been expended the sum of about four hundred dollars for books and school supplies, in excess of what has been paid for charts, and the new series of readers lately introduced, which gives more than four dollars per head for each scholar. Most of the books now in use, except the new readers, and those recently bought to fill the place of those worn out, are in a sorry state of dilapidation and shabbiness, and will very shortly have to be replaced by new ones. We would suggest to the parents the idea of a frequent inspection of the school books used by their children, and ask them to require of them the same care and neatness in handling the books, and to do it as emphatically as they would do in case they were individually called upon to put their hands in their own pockets and pay for new ones.

A few words in regard to the school houses Those in use are in a fair state of repair externally, that at the village having been painted last season. The seats of some of them are not up to the times for comfort, especially the one at East Lempster. The matter of supplying better ones must be left for your decision at the coming annual meeting.

We are pleased to see by the school registers that many of the people of this town have not lost their interest in the cause of common schools, but yearly visit the school rooms and lend by their presence the needed encouragement to both scholar and teacher; and may it never come to pass, that the people shall become indifferent to the success of that safeguard of our liberty and prosperity, the sole hope of the free action and free speech for the masses, that shall forever be maintained by the universal education of the children in our own free common schools.

Thanking the pupils, teachers and the people generally, for their uniform courtesy in this and past years, this report is respectfully suumitted.

Report of the High School Committee

FOR THE YEAR ENDING FEB. 15, 1897.

The committee secured the services of Miss Jennie P. Chapman of Laconia, N. H., as teacher of the high school. Miss Chapman was a stranger to us, but she came well recommended by those that knew something of her past success as a teacher and scholar, and we found her equal to her recommendation. She was untiring in her labors, an excellent disciplinarian, easy in manners, and clear in imparting instruction to those she had in charge. There were fifty scholars in all who attended the term, and we are sure they all made good progress in the different branches taught, as the closing examination well demonstrated, and too much praise cannot be given them for the work they did and for their moral deportment. Well did they play their part to make the Lempster High School of 1896-97 a success.

Report of Librarian.

The Free Public Library has become an important and necessary institution to all progressive people who live in this enlightened age, and to the inhabitants of Lempster it is especially so. Your library has been very well patronized in the past year. There has been more than two thousand publications taken out in the last year, making the average more than 38 each week. Since March 1st, 1896, the room has been opened to the public Saturday afternoon and evening only, and I see no reason why this arrangement has not proved satisfactory to the public and all concerned. The library room is a neat and pleasant one and will serve its purpose for many years. The only needed repairs will be a small outlay for more shelves which are much needed. Your library contains 536 books labeled and numbered for use, and 714 magazines, all in good condition. There has been over 100 bound books added to the library in the past year, noticeable among them is an Encyclopedia History of the World, in five volumes, for reference, which our scholars will appreciate in the years to come. About 20 books have been donated by different persons, and fourteen years back numbers of Harpers, Century and other magazines. Among the most liberal donors I will mention Mr. George E. Frink, a former Lempster boy and a native of the town, now of Springfield, Mass., and Mr. George Moore of Boston, Mass., also a native of Lempster. The record book shows fines to the amount of $5.32 for keeping over stated time. Only 84 cents has been received, leaving $4.48 unpaid. I am sorry to be obliged to make this showing in regard to fines imposed, but it is one of the rules of the library to collect a fine of two cents a day on books kept out more than three weeks, or if the fine is not paid the delinquent shall forfeit all library privileges. Now this is not an arbitrary rule but is quite necessary to insure the the return of the books and to prevent people who take out books being careless about their return on time. If they want to keep the book a longer time they can bring it back and renew, and so avoid a fine. When there is bad weather or bad traveling there is some excuse for this, but in the majority of cases there were no obstacles. I hope that the next year's report will have a different showing. Thanking the trustees for their kindly suggestions and cheerful co-operation, and the general public for the interest manifested, I herewith submit my annual report.

Very respectfully,

FRED W. WELCH, Librarian.

Lempster, N. H., Feb. 15, 1897.
